Overview

This is the official Rainbow Girl Brand Guide. It contains the "rules" on how to use, promote, and communicate the brand of the International Order of the Rainbow for Girls.

This guide will help to maintain the physical and emotional image of Rainbow Girls. Communication efforts should always be consistent and unified to enable the brand to be strong, reliable, and uplifting - just like the members!

Tone

When writing press releases or any form of Rainbow communications, the tone is of great importance. Rainbow Girls are proud, confident people who share a curiosity for learning and exploring the world.

When writing a story, reporting on an event, or drafting a press release, the copy should reflect that personality. When someone foreign to Rainbow Girls reads about the organization, they should feel good. They should feel enlightened. They should walk away wanting to know more about Rainbow.

Theme Line

Rainbow Gets Girls Ready for Life™

This theme should be used as much as possible in external and internal communications. Think of it as a universal tool to motivate current members and to attract future members. When asked of its meaning, Rainbow Girls should proudly state that it represents how the organization empowers them with the tools to be successful in life. Confidence. Leadership. Citizenship. These are the life skills that will carry a young girl through life.

Fonts

The main body copy font that should be used is Futura Book.

Rainbow Gets Girls Ready for Life™

Join the only international club for girls that teaches what matters most – leadership, confidence, and citizenship. Rainbow uses fun events and challenging workshops to empower girls to be the best daughter, sister, friend, or student they can be.

Think of it as a global sorority, founded in 1922, where a girl can learn that she can make a difference and become a better person. Families play an important role, too, and are invited to attend all meetings and events. Joining is easy! Girls, ages 11–20, of all faiths, regardless of race, creed, color or national origin, are welcome.

Color

Use of color is very important.
It represents the rainbow and the overall spirit of life.

Whenever possible, use the colors of the rainbow in materials.

Color

Use of color is just as important as words and photographs. Always reference the primary colors in the Rainbow logo when creating communication materials.

These strong, vibrant colors represent the energetic spirit of Rainbow Girls much better than soft, pastel colors.
